Gorillas are large mammals. They can grow to be 6 feet tall. Many gorillas live in the mountains of Africa. They live in small groups called troops, led by a male gorilla called a “Silverback”. The other members of the troop are females and young gorillas. They are mainly herbivores. They eat fruits, bamboo and leafy plants. Sometimes they may eat small insects.

Gorillas are considered to be very intelligent or smart animals. They are known for their use of tools and different ways of communicating. They can live 40-50 years.
