Raccoons are mammals. They are omnivores and eat plants and animals. They eat fruits, nuts, worms, fish, and insects. Their habitats are the forests and riverbanks of southern Canada and North America. Many times they live in hollow trees. They are “nocturnal” or active at night.

Raccoons look like they are wearing a mask. They have paws that are used like hands. They can stand up on their hind legs. In winter, they don’t hibernate but may sleep part of the time. They have heavy fur to keep them warm.

Raccoons are good swimmers. They are good climbers. Raccoons can run as fast as fifteen miles per hour. They are one of the few mammals that can climb down a tree trunk headfirst!
