Facts About Turkeys

Wild turkeys are found in North American forests and woodlands. They often sleep in flocks with other turkeys in trees to be safe from predators. They are omnivores and eat meat and plants. They feed on nuts, seeds, fruits, insects, and small animals. Even though they are the heaviest bird, they are great fliers. They can fly up to 50 miles per hour!

Male turkeys are called toms or gobblers. Their gobble can be heard a mile away. They have ruffled feathers, fanlike tails, bare heads and red wattles down their necks. The red skin hanging over their beaks are called “snoods”.

Female hens lay 4 to 17 eggs, and feed their chicks called “poults” after they hatch.
